Happy Fall Semester

The summer is coming to an end but before the Fall Semester starts soon, be sure to follow us on social media to get the most recent information about academic, mental health, and programming support. We at Inspiring Futures collaborate with many different nonprofits and work to make sure young people have the support they need to succeed.

Meet Our Intern

Issatou

Our Social Media Intern is Issatou. She was once a young person who grew out of foster care. She manages all of our social media platforms like Instagram, Tiktok, and Facebook to reach adolescents and young adults with the goal and mission of Inspiring Futures. As a student herself, Issatou aims to reach young adults who may need motivation to advance their educational and career journeys, as well as any mental health needs. She also created this newsletter!!

Meet our Academy and Outreach Coordinator, Gary

Gary is our Academic and Outreach Coordinator and newest addition to our Inspiring Futures team. As a former educator of 15 years, he has a passion for all things young people and all things education. He hopes to provide assistance to our youth in whatever capacity they may need while pursuing their academic goals.

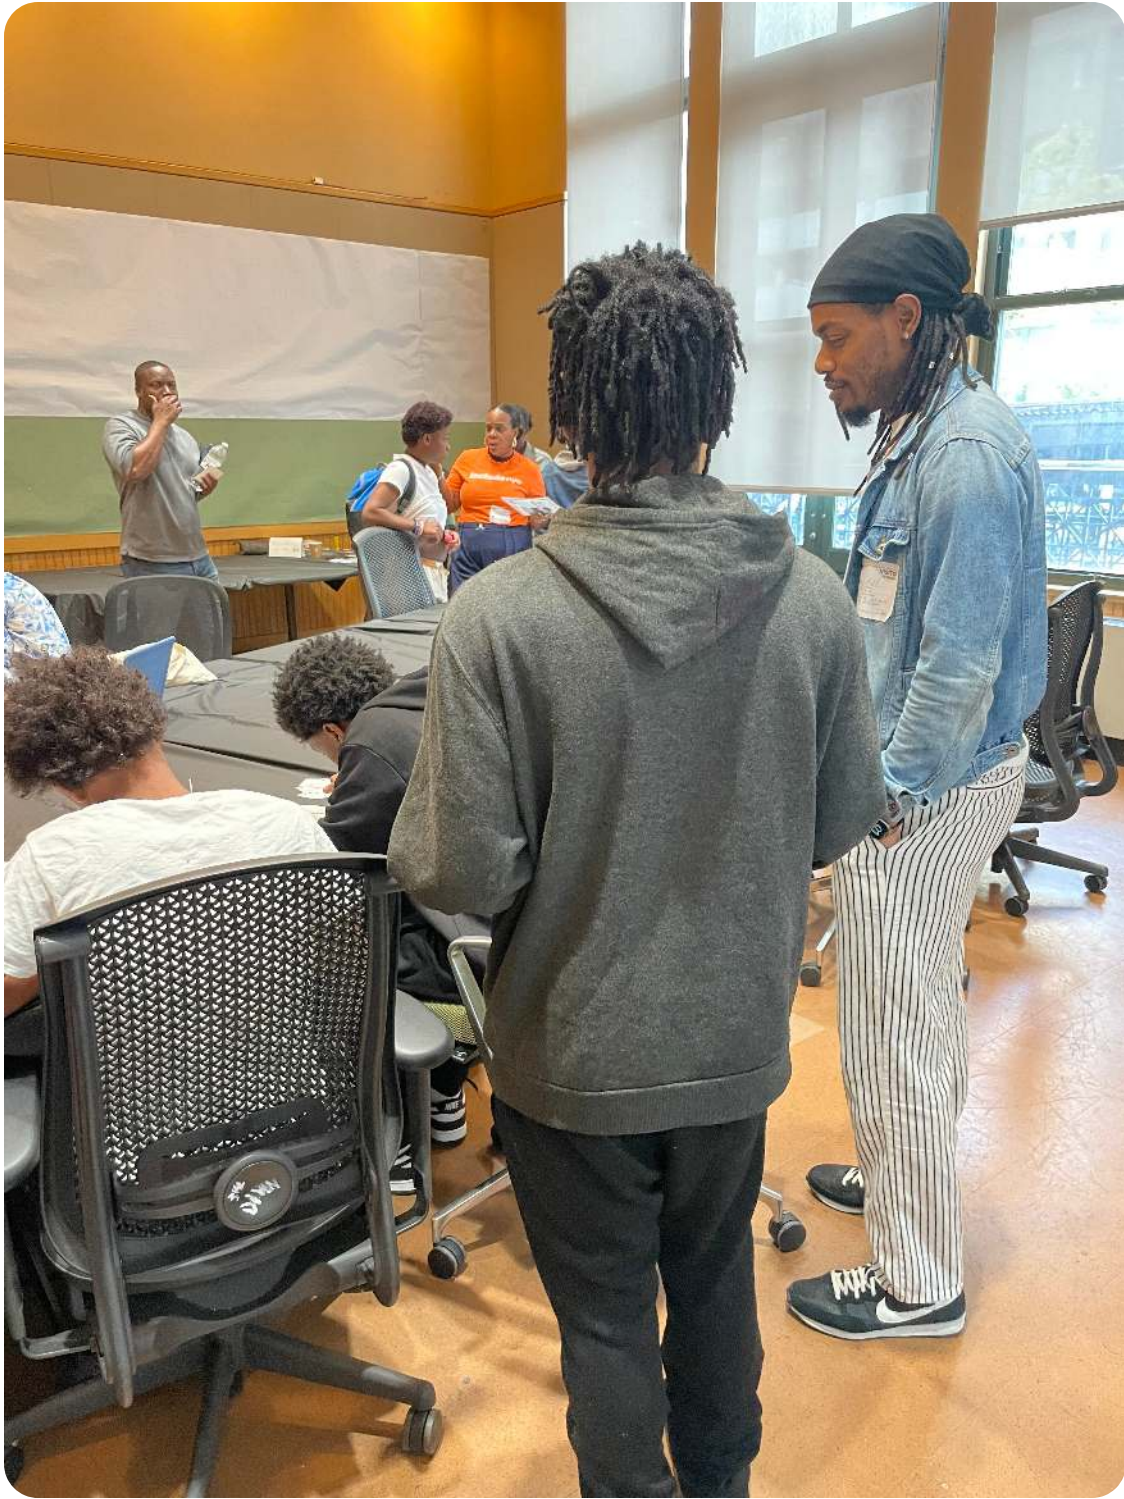

July ushered in a new resource we offer to our young people who may need emergency financial assistance. This will also help with those who are enrolled in school or are going through an exceedingly challenging time and need extra financial support. Each month we have $1,000 allotted to support program participants with their emergent needs.

Recent Event

We had the pleasure of visiting the Children's Center and had conversations with young people there about the academic and mental health support available to them. The Children's Center is where young people live temporarily while awaiting a more permanent living arrangement such as with their biological families, or a foster home. We launched mindfulness exercises where they had the chance to participate and win gift cards. Additionally, we collaborated and networked with many other nonprofits who specialize in providing other various resources.
